Yale Travel News - Additional Security Measures for Flights to the US

The US Department of Homeland Security (DHS) now requires additional security measures for all international flights to the US. These measures may include enhanced screening, as well as heightened screening of electronic devices larger than a standard smartphone.

Travelers should be prepared to remove these devices from their protective cases or outer packaging for inspection. If you have a case that requires a screwdriver or other special tools to remove, it's recommended doing so before arriving at the airport.

Travelers will also be required to carry a printed or digital copy of their airline ticket, and may also be asked to switch on all electronic devices, to ensure that they are fully charged prior to any US bound flight.

For international flights, the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) recommends arriving at the airport at least three hours before your flight, allowing time for these additional security measures.

their accounts. In the past, this report was triaged through the Yale Pcard Office. Direct delivery is a quicker more efficient way to notify cardholders of a possible compromise to their Yale University Pcard.

What do I have to do?

- If a fraud or suspicious activity notification is received, the cardholder should contact JP Morgan Chase at the number listed on the back of their Pcard. That number is also listed below.
- Cardholders can run the "My Expense Transactions" report in Workday to review transactions or additional suspicious transactions.
 - U.S./Canada Toll Free: 800-316-6056
 - Outside of the U.S.: (collect) 847-468-3748
 - TTY/TDD 800-955-8060

Does Yale University allow others to contact JP Morgan on behalf of the cardholder?

- No. Yale University does not allow proxies for University Pcards due to the confidentiality of its cardholders and to eliminate any opportunity of additional fraud activity. Therefore, as the cardholder, you will need to contact JP Morgan Chase directly.

What if I have additional questions or need further assistance?

If you have any questions or need additional assistance, please contact the Yale University Pcard Office at 203-432-3227 or email purchasing.card@yale.edu.
